Thinking about studying abroad? Why not consider a community college? More than 40 percent of all undergraduates in America study at community colleges. Some very famous people received community college education. Like who? Like former California Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger, Star Wars producer George Lucas and actor Tom Hanks. These are just a few of the many that join the ranks at community colleges every year.

So what is a community college? It's a two-year college that offers a variety of degree programs. Sometimes known as junior colleges, technical colleges or city colleges, community colleges serve different types of students. Many of them receive an associate degree and then transfer to a four-year university to complete their bachelor's degree. Other students work toward a certificate they need to get a good job. They might study to be a firefighter, a cook or a teacher's assistant. Some students take classes for personal growth in such things as photography, computer skills, foreign languages and parenting.

Here are just a few of the benefits of a community college education:
© Cost less—The tuition at a community college is frequently less than half of the tuition at a public university. You can save a lot of money by taking your basic college classes at a community college.
© Fewer English language requirements—Many community colleges have lower or no TOEFL requirements. They also offer English classes for students at all ability levels.
© Most credits transfer easily—Community colleges usually have good relationships with four-year universities. They make sure students can transfer their credits with no problem.

What are you waiting for? Take steps now to begin your pursuit of a community college education. Maybe one day your name can be on the list of famous people who attended a community college.
